

ANTI WAR MEET AT MOKENA TONITE

LOTTIE O'NEILL WINS PRAISE FOR RESOLUTION

The many friends of Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neill of Downers Grove, Republican representative of the 41st senatorial district, are mightily pleased with her fine courageous and patriotic spirit in presenting a resolution before the legislature at Springfield intended to voice the state's protest against the enactment of the obnoxious Roosevelt dictator bill.

"This resolution," says Mrs. O'Neill, "was presented in behalf of the many citizens of Illinois who desire to protest the steady trend toward a breakdown of our American form of government."

"The subject is of special importance at this time because of H. R. 1776 seeks to take from the congress its right to act in the matter of plunging this country into war. Those of all parties who advocate defense of the United States above all in times like this are alarmed that the chief executive in his zeal for aid to Great Britain may deprive our own country of its necessary safeguards."

"Many who favor aid to England where possible without jeopardizing our own republic, hope for amendments to 1776 limiting the power granted to the chief executive and an accounting on his part to the legislative branch of the government at stated intervals; also a time limit on the grant of power."

"We deplore all-out aid to England which involves the use of men for any purpose except the defense of our own country."

"There is one certainty that if the bill in question is passed despite the opposition of the public, then all those politicians at Washington who pledged themselves during the last campaign to keep us out of Europe's war are perverters and the public favoring the actions of these politicians are saps. If we had the kind of men in 1776 as we have to day, America would still be a British colony."

of lying, grafting and fawning politicians who think more of the interests of foreign countries than they do of America.

DELAY IS EXPLAINED

Last week Frankfort subscribers of the News-Bulletin failed to get their paper Friday evening due to the fact that someone blundered in handling the mail on the Rock Island train on which the papers are dispatched from the Mokena post office each Friday morning. The papers go to the Joliet post office and are scheduled to arrive in Frankfort at 5 o'clock in the evening. When the News-Bulletin was notified of the non-arrival of the Frankfort bundle, the Joliet post office was called but the papers had failed to arrive there. Saturday evening the papers arrived at the Frankfort post-office with no explanation as to the delay. A week before the Frankfort bundle was thrown off the train at New Lenox. Several months ago the Frankfort bundle was lost for several days and finally turned up in Frankfort on a Tuesday with no explanation as to the delay. The matter was taken up with the post office department, but the only satisfaction was a lot of buck passing. Last week's delay has been again taken up with the postal department and it is hoped better mail service will be had in the future. If not, the matter will be taken up with the postmaster general in Washington.

Popular Couple Married In Joliet

Saturday morning the St. John's Catholic church in Joliet was the setting for a very pretty wedding, when Miss Leona Catherine Eich, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Eich became the bride of Leo Reuttiger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Reuttiger of Maple Road. The Rev. Constantine Bach performed the ceremony.

The attendants were Miss Helen Seahill of Joliet, cousin of the bride and Donald O'Leary. The ushers were Albert Eich, brother of the bride and Bernard Reuttiger, brother of the bride-groom.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was attractively gowned in white brocaded taffeta, princess styled, with sweetheart neck and long sleeves. She wore a finger tip veil with a beaded crown and carried a bouquet of white roses, sweet peas and baby breath. The maid of honor wore a dainty floor length gown of pink net over taffeta trimmed in blue velvet. Her headress was a crown of tea roses and she carried a Colonial bouquet of pink roses and blue sweet-peas.

Following the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served to the immediate families and the bridal party at the Sievert Tea room. Covers were laid for 17 guests.

Ours is the only country in which citizens are permitted to assemble and publicly debate questions of government policy and national welfare. If that were possible in other countries the world would not be in such a terrible mess. And if we here in America don't take advantage of this high privilege any more than we have in the past, we may lose it also. When a nation becomes indifferent to national trends and permits its president and representatives to conduct the affairs of government as they please, then that nation of people is moving slowly but surely toward a rude awakening; then it no longer deserves the privileges and rights of true democracy.

It is with this thought in mind that the Mokena Civic Association in cooperation with the Mokena Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, has arranged for a town meeting to be held in the Hatch Hall in Mokena for this evening, Friday, Feb. 7th at 8 o'clock. The America First Committee will send Gregory Doyle, a Chicago attorney to furnish the people with all the information available on the bills now pending legislation—which the majority of Americans view with such great perturbation.

Are you interested in the welfare of America? If you are and you should be, then by all means attend this meeting. Mr. Gregory Doyle, a business man and a lawyer, knows whereof he speaks and he is willing to answer any and all questions. Do not pass up this opportunity to inform yourself on matters which are of such vital interest to every American. The date: This evening, Feb. 7. The time: 8 o'clock. The place: Hatch Hall, Mokena.

Boy Scout Work Encourages Confidence in Young America

By WARREN WILLIAM

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WASHINGTON, D. C. —

Plagued by fears of world disaster, Americans will find new encouragement in the future of this country during Boy Scout week, February 7 to 13. More than 1,500,000 future citizens are enrolled in this nation-wide organization which follows the slogan, "Be Prepared."

Fully conscious of the emergency facing America today, the Boy Scouts are endeavoring to become a signal and effective asset to the country. Scout officials point out that the new slogan, "Strengthening and Invigorating Democracy," is more than just a slogan—it is a plan of action.

Take 'Roll Call'

First step in this new program was taken last September. Because it was done smoothly and efficiently, few persons were even conscious of the nation-wide roll call and inventory taken in every one of the 40,000 Scout units throughout the nation. This work forms the basis of an extensive plan to make Scouting more effective.

In many communities older boys are making ready to act as Emergency Service Corps, trained to apply Scout lore in assisting the Red of 1910 the late William D. Boyce, a Chicago publisher, was in London on a business trip. One evening when he became hopelessly lost in a heavy fog, a boy appeared out of the night and offered to guide him. Mr. Boyce handed the youth a tip, but he refused it, saying he was a Boy Scout and part of his duty was to be helpful.

Familiar to millions of Americans is this symbolic picture of a Boy Scout. It has appeared on the front cover of the Scout Handbook for many years.

The result was the founding of an organization in America that has attracted more than 8,700,000 persons during the last 31 years.

Taft Honorary President

President William Taft accepted the office of honorary president proffered him immediately upon the organization's incorporating, and since that time each succeeding President has held that office.

Great progress was made in 1911 to put the organization on a sound basis. The national council was established and the first annual meeting was held at the White House. The first edition of the Handbook was published and the Scout oath, law, badge and fundamental policies were adopted. Before the end of the year the membership grew to include 61,500 Scouts and organizers.

The Scout movement was expanded to include members in every state during 1912. Sea Scouting was launched and Boys' Life was purchased to become the official magazine. During the spring of 1913 the Scouts gave their first assistance in a major disaster when spring floods inundated parts of Ohio and Indiana.

After the end of the World war in 1918, the Scouts rendered first-aid service throughout the country in the influenza epidemic. That year Rotary clubs started the present wide-spread co-operation by business men's clubs and other institutions in sponsoring troops.

Half-Million Members

Membership in the Boy Scouts of America passed the half-million mark in 1920. The first International Scout Jamboree which was held in London that year was attended by representatives from 32 countries, including 300 from the United States.

Today, with the largest membership in its history, the Boy Scouts of America are ready for any demands that may be made of them in the present world crisis. It is ready not only to act in case of emergency, but it is ready to continue to uphold American democracy.

Author Describes 'Life After Death'

Claims Ample Experiment Provides Real Proof For His Theory.

NEW YORK.—Though differing in its military phase, World war II nonetheless appears to be running true to the form of World war I in an aspect important in the opinion of psychologists. That aspect has to do with revival of wide-spread interest in what from the religious standpoint is called spiritualism and in scientific circles is known as psychical research.

It was during the mass killings of the first World war that Conan Doyle stopped the flow of his famous Sherlock Holmes detective stories to announce boldly that he was in communication with the dead and could prove it. The rest of his life was given over to offering that proof, or what he thought was proof of his theory.

'Speaks' With Dead.

Actuated by the same conviction, Sir Oliver Lodge, one of the great physical scientists of all time, brought consolation into millions of bereaved British homes by his book, "Raymond." In it he related conversations he believed he had had with his son after the latter's death in action during a battle "somewhere in France."

But the psychic work of Doyle and that of Lodge were only examples of the hundreds of "revelations" published in England and America between 1914 and 1920—by ouija board operators, table-tilters and amateur clairvoyants as well as by trained scientific experimenters. In addition, strange tales had been brought back by soldiers who had fought at the front. Many still remember the story of the Angels of Mons.

And now with Europe once more drenched in blood, with people being killed daily and whole populations living under hourly threat of death, men of achievement like Lodge and Doyle are again testifying to their conviction that those who have died can and do communicate with the living. And this time something more than mere testimony is being offered. One book, just published, "The Unobstructed Universe," by Stewart Edward White, undertakes to chart a program for proving survival by physical experiment and not just through so-called revelation.

Life After Death.

He has embarked on what he considers an even more important exploring task—that of finding out and reporting what goes on beyond the very borders of life itself. Why he believes he has succeeded in this new exploration is told in "The Unobstructed Universe."

His interest in psychical research is due largely to the persistence of his wife, Betty. It had long been established that she herself was possessed of remarkable psychic powers. But White was skeptical 20 years ago of his wife's excursions into a forbidden frontier which he could not explore himself. An unusually practical man, he had to be shown, and was at last convinced only by the mounting weight of evidence she provided.

It was a logical outcome of their joint psychic experiments that, after his wife's death in April, 1939, White set about seeking to establish contact with her. How, in his own belief, he finally succeeded he related in "The Unobstructed Universe."

White's book purports to present a detailed report of how the spiritual form retains its personal identity; how it is fed, clothed and sheltered. The work and even the pleasures of life after death are described.

Of intense interest is the explanation offered of how the transcended individual lives on with earthly friends, though unseen—not merely as a memory, but as a fully aware person.

Some will think, as they did in the case of Conan Doyle and Sir Oliver Lodge, that Stewart Edward White, self-deceived, is just another brilliant writer of good literature gone wrong.

"I don't object to that," he says. "It's part of the game of putting over a new idea."

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Fight on President's aid-to-Britain program links personal element to Wilson's opposition . . . British make grave mistake in agricultural policy.

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—So many of the political phases of the present help to Britain situation remind observers of the days just before American participation in the first World war that the actual relationships of some of the men involved are of interest.

For instance, there is Sen. Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri, one of the leading opponents of President Roosevelt's foreign policy. The senator is the son of Speaker Champ Clark, who in 1915 and 1916 was one of the outstanding opponents of President Wilson, insisting, as his son does now, that "the President is leading us into war."

Of course the Clark case was embittered by the personal rivalry of the two men. Champ Clark had been a candidate for the Democratic nomination in 1912 and, according to majority rule, was in a way entitled to it, for he won all the primaries in which he entered, including some against Woodrow Wilson.

Senator Clark was his father's parliamentary clerk at the time, and no son was ever more devotedly loyal and partisan.

LA FOLLETTE ISOLATIONIST

Another son who is carrying on the same fight his father made against the White House on the isolationist issue is Robert M. La Follette. Perhaps no figure in our political history was ever treated more drastically than the elder La Follette for what was regarded as his unpatriotic course.

Charles A. Lindbergh, consciously or not, is affected by the same sort of thing. His father, a member of the house in those days, was an isolationist, and voted against the declaration of war. He was persecuted, at a time when the Atlantic flier was at probably the most impressionable age.

Sen. Burton K. Wheeler is another of this group, though in Wheeler's case he underwent persecution himself. In the war days he was a district attorney in Montana, and if there was anything short of traitor which was not said about him, it could not be printed anyway.

He had plenty of enemies, both in Montana and Washington, who virtually left nothing unsaid about him, so naturally he bears a few scars. Add to this the fact that he became closely associated later with the elder La Follette, being his running mate on the Progressive ticket for President in 1924, and you have a background which will explain everything.

A study of the list of those opposing the lend-lease bill to aid Britain will reveal that while the illustrations given are the most spectacular, there are plenty of others.

Britain's Agricultural Policy Unsound

It is very obvious now that the British made a mistake in their whole agricultural policy, from the national defense standpoint—a mistake almost as grave as their lack of preparedness.

Sir Charles Ross, inventor and manufacturer of the famous Ross rifle in the days preceding and during the last World war, has been pounding away at the British government from his home in Washington since 1939 to do something drastic about the food situation.

Sir Charles has been deeply interested in agricultural problems for many years. As the largest remaining landowner in Scotland, he pried every bit of information possible out of the U. S. department of agriculture with a view to making those lands more productive.

As a result, he came early to a pronounced conviction that tractors were absolutely necessary. Early in the war he urged that it was vital to Britain's safety to have every possible acre producing food. He seized on a calculation printed in the London Times which showed that some 3,000,000 odd acres, which had been under cultivation at the close of the last war, in 1918, were not being used for the production of food a year ago.

"Proper use of those 3,000,000 acres," says Sir Charles, "would have made Britain almost self-supporting on foodstuffs. But this was not done."

"But for years prior to the outbreak of this war the British government had deliberately discouraged domestic agriculture, allowing the prices to sag below the cost of production. The purpose of this was to give a trade advantage to our industries. We wanted to sell our manufactured products in Argentina for example, so we wanted to be able to buy in return the beef and grain of that country," he explained.

Tonsil Removal Doesn't Always Prevent Colds

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHEN a youngster has frequent colds, parents may feel that removal of the tonsils might prevent these colds. Experience has amply proven that the removal of tonsils does not prevent colds except in some cases where the cold always begins with a sore throat.

There is present throughout the world today a feeling that tonsils should not be removed unless it can be definitely shown that they are to blame for the symptoms present. Thus in the Hospital for Sick Children, London, 2,729 operations for removal of tonsils were performed in 1938, as compared with 4,730 operations in 1930.

In discussing the removal of tonsils and adenoids, Sir Lancelot Barrington-Ward at the Royal Society of Medicine, said that the tonsil was in his experience much the more dangerous element. The structure of the tonsil allowed organisms to remain dormant or quiet, but nevertheless active, leading to chronic general poisoning of the system or flare-up into acute inflammation from time to time.

Adenoids, on the other hand, acted simply as an obstruction to the breathing or by a low grade infection causing inflammation of the ear or the glands in the neck.

Size Not Important. In discussing tonsils it was stated that large tonsils might not be septic (pouring poison into the blood stream) and septic tonsils might not be large. Mere size is not important unless it is causing obstruction.

How can it be known that a tonsil or tonsils are septic? The appearance doesn't tell much, but if there are certain noticeable conditions the physician usually decides to have the tonsils removed.

1. Repeated attacks of tonsillitis which can only be stopped by removing the tonsils.

2. Chronic or persistent enlargement of the upper deep gland of neck, without enlargement of the other glands, always means infection of the tonsils.

3. Middle ear diseases followed by mastoid infection and deafness is due to infection from tonsil and adenoid in most cases.

Infected tonsils should be removed when there is a history of rheumatism accompanied by heart disease or chorea-St. Vitus' dance.

Facts Regarding Angina Pectoris

ANGINA pectoris—breast pang not only frightens the patient but frightens the entire family, as these "heart attacks" are distressing to endure and even to watch. There is a strangling, vise-like pain in the chest over the heart or under the breast bone which is brought on by physical effort (exercise) or emotional disturbance. It lasts but a short time, during which the patient stands in whatever position he happens to be in at the time and as he makes the slightest move it may be his last.

Angina pectoris is often caused by the heart muscle (the muscle which pumps the blood from the heart to all parts of the body) not receiving enough blood from the little blood vessels which supply the heart muscle with blood from the general supply as it circulates throughout the body. Naturally, if the heart muscle does not get enough pure blood it cannot work, that is, pump the blood from the heart to all parts of the body, and so no movement is made by the patient to make the heart muscle do any work until it gets a little more pure blood into it with which to continue work.

These attacks of angina pectoris are really "life savers" because the individual learns what is likely to bring on an attack—heavy work, excitement, a fit of anger or other emotional disturbance—and so by living carefully he is enabled to live a useful and often a long life.

Most angina patients carry little pearls (thin glass tubes) of amyl nitrite, that can be easily broken in a handkerchief and inhaled, which soon ends the attack.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Please suggest another treatment other than Whitfield's ointment for athlete's foot.

A.—The symptoms are those of athlete's foot—ringworm of the feet—as your physician has pointed out. It is called eczematoid ringworm of the feet. Whitfield's ointment half strength is considered excellent treatment. The dusting powder prescribed by your physician is likely sodium thiosulphate 1 part to 4 parts boric acid.

Hospitality for Our Over-Night Guests

By RUTH WYETH SPEARS

SOME people have a talent for making guests comfortable and they are not always the people with big houses and what used to be called a "spare room" for company. I thought of this one morning as I sat propped up on a perfectly comfortable folding cot eating breakfast from a tray.

When not in use my cot was stored in the hall under the ingenious frame sketched here. This frame had a full skirted cover of blue denim trimmed in red and blue flowered chintz. The medicine closet on top stood on feet made of spools glued in place; and was painted red inside and out. On the cabinet shelves were cleansing tissue and other useful things.

NOTE: In Mrs. Spears' Books 5 and 6 you will find directions for streamlining old-fashioned couches and chairs, as well as many other suggestions for bringing your home up-to-date. Also directions for designing and making rugs; hooked, braided and crocheted; each book has 32 pages of pictures and directions. Send order to:

Head Off 'Enemy' Planes

Eyes and ears of U. S. anti-aircraft batteries are shown trying to locate bombing planes "attacking" New York during recent air maneuvers. At left, a powerful searchlight follows directions flashed by the sound detector (right) to locate a plane flying overhead so anti-aircraft guns can shoot it down.

World's Largest Airport Nears Completion in Miami

MIAMI, FLA.—The world's largest commercial aviation landing field, a 900-acre tract with runways a mile long, is nearing completion on the outskirts of Miami.

Known as the Miami International Air terminal, the new air base will be the clearing house for all air traffic between the United States, the West Indies and the South American Republics. It represents a potential expenditure of more than $9,000,000.

Present plans call for the runways and landing field facilities to be completed by July 1, when the new airport will be formally placed in service.

Last year during a period of six months 1,152 planes entered or cleared Miami to and from the West Indies, Cuba and Central and South American countries, carrying 45,814 passengers, 243,428 pounds of mail, and 291,540 pounds of express, valued at more than $5,500,000.

Exaggerated Delays
Every delay is too long to one who is in a hurry.—Seneca.

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of worldwide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all pained.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

Withers arose and Lucy, watching in a sort of fascinated awe over her note-book, saw that his hands trembled. His lips drew back a little showing his yellow teeth.

"Your mill will be for sale, Virgie Morgan! If it ain't for sale today—it will be. It will be! I don't figure to be balked in what I set out to do. Not by anybody. You better do a little thinking, Virgie. You'll sell to me—reasonable—or I'll get capital and put you out of business. Now I'll thank you for my hat."

She had not, Virgie thought thankfully, afterward, put him out of the house. She had kept her temper and she had kept her head. But when he had gone rattling away in his old car, she strode the length of the room and punched the fire savagely.

"The old pea-hen! The old ant-eater! Put me out of business, will he? My mill's falling in, is it?"

From a corner came Marian's worried voice. "He might do it, Mother."

"He might do it?" Virgie was grateful for an outlet for her sizzling wrath. "He might run for Congress—he might try to blow up Whiteside Mountain, too. But where would he get? Nowhere! He's trying to bluff me out—the penny-pinching old hound dog! He's sore because he couldn't marry my mill and get it without putting out a cent. I know Wallace Withers. I've known him most of his life—as well as though I had stirred up the mud to make him!"

"But the mill is shabby, Mother. All the metal roofing is rusty and the mortar falling out of the bricks—and Tom has propped up the fence in a dozen places."

Red burned in Virgie's cheeks. Her eyes shot blue sparks.

"I should spend money to fancy up the mill on the outside when the men aren't back on full pay yet! When I can't even discount my bills! Your father never asked for more than thirty days in his life—and I'm thankful if I can get anything paid off in ninety."

"We only took sixty for the new parts for the Jordan machine, Mrs. Morgan."

"Much obliged, Lucy. Stick with me, will you? I seem to need a couple of friends."

"Father," Marian persisted, "had old-fashioned ideas—you know that, Mother. He was too conservative for these times."

Virgie looked up at David's picture—at the straight, strong, judicial line of his lips, at his thoughtful, cautious eyes. The look heartened her, stopped the odd quivering in her knees, the shaken cold anger that tore at her. David was with her. He had died but he had not taken his spirit away from the mill. It walked there, stood over the blow pits and the great digesters and deckers, where the raw pulp was steamed and thinned and ground and dried—fine fiber that would one day be milled into missals for nuns or paper on which letters would be written to old mothers.

She gave David a look that reached a hand to him through this strange gloom, this shadow which was as fearsome and intangible as the swoop of a hawk through the wind.

"Your father's way was an old-fashioned way," she said, "but so are a lot of things old-fashioned. Things like good credit and a good name, things like fairness and honor and decent dealing. They've invented some smart methods but they've never invented anything that takes the place of those old-fashioned things!"

"We could paint the roller mill," suggested Lucy faintly. "We could let the boys work on it slack days."

"And have Wallace Withers walk by and see that he's got us scared? Let him build his pulp mill. I'm not going to be stampeded into changing my ways. Morgan pulp is known wherever men make paper. Nobody gives a darn if it's milled in a pole shack with a brush roof. It's good pulp. Lucy, you put all this in the form of a report. I might want to prove some time that old Withers threatened me. I'm going to call that lawyer tonight and go over to see Tom the first thing in the morning and enjoin those crooks from cutting that timber."

Marian stood up, slim and grave and gallant. "All right, Mother—if you're going to fight, we'll fight with you."

Virgie's grimace melted and her eyes misted briefly.

"I was just standing here wishing to the Lord that I had a son. Life gets pretty thick for a woman, sometimes. But—if we hang together we can beat 'em. You go now, Marian, and take Lucy home. Make Lottie go with you—I don't want you coming back on that road alone."

"Mother, I've driven it alone a hundred times!"

"I know that. And I've been making pulp for years, but now all of a sudden somebody takes a notion to burn down the mill!"

Though she rose at intervals to take bromides, Virgie could not sleep. Her battling spirit was roused, she found herself clenching her fists in the dark making up savage and telling speeches and muttering fragments of them aloud.

The thin, blue winter dawn came late. She had already given up hope of rest when the east began to be pearl and aquamarine. She got up and dressed, putting on her good blue suit, her best silk blouse. She would have preferred going into action in her old corduroys and boots, but this fight today was to be one of wits, of law and shrewdness—not to be conducted in a disreputable old hat jerked belligerently over one eye.

At least, thank goodness, her enemy was now standing forth in the open. The secret hawk that beat dark wings between her and the sky was a thing of form and definition.

And she felt sure that if she could keep Payne and Hooper and Wallace Withers from getting possession of the timber area on Hazel Fork, she could defeat their schemes. She knew every inch of land, every standing tree, every foot of available pulp wood for a hundred miles around. What little Wallace Withers owned, even counting the acreage he had bought from Perry Bennett, would not go far. No man in his right mind would put money into a mill, with so scant a supply as that in prospect. And the rest, except for Tom's rich heritage, was tied up by leases by power concerns or lumber people—or by the great Champion mill, except what she herself controlled.

She knew that Wallace Withers would extend himself to destroy her. No pestilence ever set loose in any clime could work the havoc wrought by an ignorant, bigoted man, working ruthlessly for his own ends, especially when under this fierce, cold passion for eminence there burned the moving fury of a personal spite. Wallace was a vain and unscrupulous man, disdained. No ethics would deter him, no reasoning touch him. He would break her if he could, because only by reducing her to suppliant meekness could he rebuild the brittle tower of his own prime conceit.

She made a cup of coffee, in the kitchen, and drank it black and hot. Lottie came scuffling in in bedroom slippers, her hair plastered stiffly in a net.

"My goodness," she exclaimed, "you going to the mill this early? Why'n't you call me to get you some breakfast?"

"I'll eat later. I've got a lot to do. I don't know when I'll be back."

Her old car roared down the hill. The early morning fog was lying in great white scarves of feathers down the slopes of the mountains. The steam of the mill drifted like wings against a dawn-quickened sky, as she approached the gate.

Suddenly she found herself deeply moved, loving that shambling building, the windows burning in the wan, wintry sun, the ranked piles of wood, even the choking, sulphide smell that lay along the ground so insistently. The mill was her life—all the rest of her life. It was David—what was left to her of the man she had loved.

She would fight for it. Stiffly she set her chin on that thought.

The night men, not yet gone off shift, stared at her as she walked, eyes ahead, face grim and resolute, across the frozen yard.

CHAPTER XIV

The men at the mill had worked all night, unloading the wrecked car, repairing the track, loading again. Disregarding the raw wind that blew through the valley, the occasional spit of snow, Branford Wills had worked with them, observing and listening, making himself as helpful and unobtrusive as possible. He did not deceive himself. Something was wrong at the mill. There was much shouting and rough talk, but there was also a secretiveness, a watchfulness. It appeared to Wills that among the older hands there was also an uneasy discomfort.

They were uncertain of each other. And a few had an air of insolence, a tendency to swagger. But Wills could not discover that any definite animosity was directed toward him. They were curt and one or two were a bit scornful of his ability in matters of strength or skill, but there were no covert sneers to be detected, no goading or insults. He was a tenderfoot and an outsider and they let him know it, but that was all.

It was growing day when he returned to his room at the Clark cottage to snatch a few hours of sleep. His legs were a trifle shaky, his throat felt raw, but he was grimly resolute. Some undercurrent was working in the Morgan mill and he intended to know what it was and what force impelled it. He had a double motive. He was indebted to Virgie and if he could solve this riddle of sabotage and put an end to it, it was little enough to do to repay that debt. And there was Marian.

Somehow he had to repair his blundering, make himself a man again in her eyes. He slept uneasily, awakened when the morning whistle blew.

Ada Clark's mother protested as he set out again, sheepskin collar shrugged high around his ears.

"You'll be down again and worse than ever if you don't take better care of yourself," she declared.

But he gave her a one-sided grin and tramped off, his two sandwiches in his coat pocket.

At the mill office he found Virgie already at her desk, with Lucy and Daniels standing about, their faces worried.

"Come along in," Virgie ordered as he opened the door. "You'll have to know about this. Seven men quit this morning."

"The Spains—and the two Andersons," Lucy added. "Billy Mount and his boy and Lucius." Her eyes were sorrowful and accusing. Her manner said louder than words, "This is your fault." Daniels was fiddling nervously with the bunch of keys in his fingers. For an instant Branford Wills got the impression that Daniels was evading, that there was something defensive in his manner, but he put that aside. They were all worried, Virgie most of all.

"That West Virginia stuff has to go through," she said. "We'll have to have somebody to tend the decker." For twenty years Billy Mount had tended the great machines, taken a fierce pride in the texture of the pulp that rolled through the presses.

"Could I do it?" Wills volunteered. "I have ordinary intelligence. I think I could do what Billy Mount could do."

"So you're thinking about my feelings, are you?"

"I need you outside," Virgie said. "With the Andersons gone we'll need somebody to get stuff in."

"But—why should those fellows quit?" Wills asked. "There's no other place for them in town. You treated them well—"

"They probably had reasons—fairly good reasons," Daniels was a trifle dry.

"Look here—if I'm in any way responsible for this—" Wills began vigorously, but Virgie waved a hand.

"Sit down—and keep your head on and your shirt-tail in! I'm responsible for this. Wallace Withers wants to buy this mill. Somehow or other he's working against me. How, I don't know yet. But I will know. It's a fight. Wallace says he'll put me out of business if I don't sell. Maybe he will—but he'll have a merry little time doing it. If you people want to stick with me—"

"Of course we'll stick," said Lucy eagerly.

"It might," Stanley Daniels suggested, "be possible to compromise."

Virgie glared at him. "Compromise? Do I look like a woman who would compromise?"

"Business," Daniels defended, "is built on compromises. It has to be. Individualism cannot always survive."

"And so you think," Virgie cut back, "that I ought not to fight? That I ought to let Wallace Withers threaten to ruin me and never lift a hand? Is that what you think?"

"I think you are fighting a definite trend, Mrs. Morgan," Daniels grew a trifle oratorical. "You're living in an era which will see the death of the small business, of individual enterprise—personal control. There is an inevitability in it that you do not recognize. It may mean defeat for you and I think you are the sort of person who would suffer pretty badly in defeat."

"So you're thinking about my feelings, are you? Well, these are my feelings, in case any of you are in the dark. I had rather see the mill that David Morgan built destroyed—every brick, every wheel, every bolt in it—than to haggle with Wallace Withers—or surrender. If that's crazy, I'm crazy! Now, get to work, all of you! Lucy, get Champion on the wire and tell 'em I want seven hands for a few days. Decker men and outside hands. They've got part-time people always on hand they can spare. We won't grind today, we'll clean the mill. Come along, you boys."

She was fiercely executive all day. The atmosphere of the mill, already tense, grew galvanic as she cracked the whip of her indomitable will. Lucy Fields went about breathing excitedly but Wills, helping old Frank Emmet to clean and oil the drum-barkers and the toothy cables that snaked the green wood in for grinding, kept a thoughtful watch.

Even granting that this man Withers, who coveted the mill had, somehow, been able to engineer the various calamities that had descended on the plant in the past few days, there remained to be discovered the means by which he had worked. Wills was not satisfied. He meant to do some sleuthing on his own.

He waited till the whistle blew at night and Lucy had put on her shabby green coat and gone out, then went to the office where Virgie sat studying a map on her desk. Outside murky lights burned in the yard and steam drifted down to lie in torn, cold wreaths along the ground.

Virgie looked up at him, and it appeared to Branford Wills that there was something deeper than weariness in her strong face. She looked a little stricken, as though something had been taken away from her that could not be returned.

She showed him the map. "This is what worries me," she said, "this land that belonged to Tom Pruitt. This is what Withers is counting on—this timber acreage. He and Payne and those other fellows—the fellow Tom shot—have got a court order allowing them to cut timber enough to satisfy their claims. And you know what that means. The court can't go up there and scale up stuff. They'll strip it and with what timber is standing there they can set up a mill and run it for three or four years. Long enough to worry me, anyway."

"And you're convinced that Withers is at the bottom of all your troubles?"

"What else can I think? He came to my house last night and made threats. Maybe they're just using him to handle local contracts and connections that outsiders couldn't put over. Mountain people are peculiar. They're suspicious of a stranger but a home-talent crook can do quite a lot with 'em. I reckon Wallace thinks he's in."

"Let me see that map again," Wills said. He had been a maker of maps, Virgie remembered. He anchored the colored sheet with an inkbottle and a slide rule and studied it.

"I filed an injunction to keep them off this morning," Virgie said. "Filed it for Tom, of course. It may not work. They may have the judge sewed up. Tom does what I tell him usually—but I don't always get there quite soon enough. I went over at daybreak—but I should have gone yesterday."

"They'd been there ahead of you? But surely he wouldn't listen to them?"

"I don't know. It's worrying me." She breathed wearily, like a spent runner. "They sent a lawyer to scare Tom, late yesterday. They told him that Cragg was filing suit against him for fifty thousand dollars' damages. Perhaps they can do it, in law—I haven't looked into it. That's not the point. They gave Tom a good scare—and then they offered to settle. So he signed something—and he doesn't know what he signed."

"So everything you have done for him may be lost? Doesn't he understand that you're looking out for his interest?"

"You couldn't understand a mountain man, I'm afraid. Up to a certain point they'll listen. Beyond that—they're rampant individualists, as young Daniels says. Tom has always been a helpless old body—David looked after him. But no mountain man believes that a woman could know more than he does."

"Is there a blue-print of Pruitt's tract anywhere?"

"It's here in the safe. Do you want it?"

"I want it—and I want to see the land. Could I have a car and some one who knows the way to go over there tomorrow?"

"I'll send you a car—and a driver. What do you want to see it for? Even if I keep those men out of it, it will go back to Tom. I'll never timber it."

"I think," Wills said, "that I was once lost in that region. The outline on this map is somehow familiar. It gives me an idea. I'd rather not talk about it till I'm sure of it."

"Most young chaps," Virgie was dry, "want to talk first and do something about it afterward."

At home that night Virgie stretched her slippers to the fire and faced her daughter resolutely.

"I said you were going!" she stated grimly. "Who else can I trust? This is more important than your silly personal prejudices."

Marian stood stormily, staring out a dark window.

"How do you know it is important? Because he says so! Oh, Mother—can't you see that all this Wallace Withers business is just a coincidence? Wallace Withers heard about the trouble in the mill and he thought it was a good time to jump in and try to bluff and scare you. The Spains and the Andersons and Billy didn't leave because of Wallace Withers—I'll never believe that. They didn't want to work under Wills and they resented his Sherlocking around the mill. You won't believe me—but Lucy thinks the same as I—and so does Stanley Daniels."

"So—you've all got your heads together and decided that I'm a senile old fool, eh?"

"Mother, I didn't say that. Please—"

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THE CHRISTIAN'S ATTITUDE
TOWARD POSSESSIONSLESSON TEXT—Luke 16:10-15, 19-23.
GOLDEN TEXT—Ye cannot serve God and mammon.—Luke 16:13.

"In the service" is an expression much used today. Every community has young men in the service of their country. But they are not the only "service men," for the fact is that every man and woman serves under some authority. Our lesson today reminds us that our attitude toward our possessions determines both character and destiny. We decide whether they shall rule us or we shall rule them.

I. Who Is Your Master—God or Gold? You Decide! (vv. 10-15).

The decision here is of the "either—or" variety. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon" (which means "riches").

Money itself is neither good nor bad. It is the use to which it is put that determines whether it is to bless or to destroy. Rightly gained and rightly used, money is an honor to the man who has it, and will, through him, become a means of blessing. On the other hand, money which controls a man will blast his own soul and those of others round him.

Who decides which it shall be? You—and you alone. Here we come to the central truth of the matter. "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much" (v. 10). We generally read that as though it said, "He that is now faithful in a little will later have an opportunity to be faithful in much." That may be true, but what Jesus said here was that he "is faithful in much."

The point is that the man who is faithful in the much shows that life attitude by being faithful in the little. That is, only the man who is right in the great matter of his relationship with God will be the ruler over his possessions for the glory of God and the good of his fellow man.

Someone may say, "I don't believe that." Well, you are in bad company (see vv. 14, 15). The Pharisees, who loved money, who were self-righteous, and whose attitude was an abomination in the sight of God, derided the words of Jesus.

If you don't like that kind of companions, I invite you to come over on God's side.

II. Where Will You Spend Eternity? Your Life Decides (vv. 19-23).

Our life beyond the grave is determined by our life on this side of death. Yes, we know that eternal life is a gift of God received by faith in Christ as Saviour, quite apart from our own works or our merit. But let us not forget that this means far more than uttering a few words of profession or going through a formula.

The man who really turns to Christ in saving faith becomes a new creature; he is born again (1 Pet. 1:23). That means that he walks "in newness of life" (Rom. 6:4). And thus his life in this world determines both by decision for Christ and daily living for Him that he will, like Lazarus, be received into eternal blessedness.

Sad to say, the opposite is also true. Living as the rich man did, for self, will bring judgment in the world to come. There is no indication that he was especially wicked, but only that he loved his money, revelled in the flamboyant display of his wealth (v. 19), and had no thought for others (v. 21). Here again, the point is that these outward deeds were the expression of a heart attitude against God.

Death came to both of these men. It will come to all of us, unless the Lord returns to take us to Himself. It is not a pleasant matter to think of death, but only the unintelligent will fail to recognize the coming of that day. When it comes, it may be too late to make any real life decisions. Now is the acceptable time. Today is the day of salvation.

The verses immediately following our lesson in chapter 16 indicate that the decision of men concerning their relationship to God is not dependent on the miraculous, but on moral and spiritual truth. The man who says he would believe if he could only see God perform a miracle is only evading the issue. Verse 31 says that the man who rejects God's Word does so because he wants to, not because he needs to be convinced by a miracle.

We Sleep to Wake

One who never turned his back, but marched breast forward,
Never doubted clouds would break;
Never dreamed, though right were worsted, wrong would triumph;

Held we fall to rise, are baffled to fight better,
Sleep to wake.

—Robert Browning.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Spirit" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, February 9.

The Golden Text was, "If we live in the Spirit, let us also walk in the Spirit" (Galatians 5:25).

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "God is a Spirit; and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth" (John 4:24).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spirit being God, there is but one Spirit, for there can be but one infinite and therefore one God. There are neither spirits nor gods many. There is no evil in Spirit, because God is Spirit. The theory, that Spirit is distinct from matter but must pass through it, or into it, to be individualized would reduce God to dependency on matter, and establish a basis for pantheism. Spirit, God, has created all in and of Himself" (p. 335).

NEWS FROM SPRINGFIELD

by BERNICE T. VAN DER VRIES

Representative, 7th District General Assembly of Illinois

The appointment of committees in the two branches of the General Assembly is the "GO" signal for work. Although a few bills have been passed while the organization of committees was taking place from now on bills will be referred to a committee appropriate to the subject of the bill.

In the Senate the number of committees was reduced to the number of senators in the majority party since only members of the party in power receive chairmanships. In the House there were so many requests for chairmanships that the rules committee instead of reducing the number of committees, reduced the committee assignments for each member and in doing so were able to reduce the size of some committees. Appropriations is the largest committee with 65 members.

Committee assignments for the Senator and Representatives from the Seventh District are as follows: Senator Bidwill: Insurance, chairman; Public Utilities, vice-chairman; Agriculture, Industrial Affairs, Municipalities, Oil and Gas, Transportation.

Representative McGrath: Efficiency and Economy, Liquor Regulation, Municipalities, Roads and Bridges.

Representative Sprague: Insurance, vice chairman; Education, Industrial Affairs, Judiciary, Municipalities, Transportation Revenue.

Representative Van der Vries: Municipalities, chairman; Appropriations, Civil Service, Education, Parks, Public Health, Charities and Corrections.

Senator Bidwill to clarify the confusion in municipalities on the question of whether three or six trustees should be elected at the spring elections. With Senator Keane he has introduced a bill providing for a Commission for educating mentally handicapped children. He has also introduced a bill to license architects and the business of architecture.

Representative Sprague has introduced with Representative McCabe a bill which permits Cook County to create a highway authority for the construction and operation of roads, bridges, viaducts, tunnels and other traffic facilities. It provides for the imposition and collection of tolls for the use of such facilities.

The longest bill ever introduced in the Illinois legislature has been introduced in the Senate. It is a municipal code which has been prepared by a commission established for that purpose. The printed bill has 500 pages.

NEW MONEY FOR YOUR OLD THINGS

SO YOU THINK!

"Lend or lease", that's what a lot of Mokena folks have been wondering about regarding the shipping of war materials to Britain. Many have said, as I have said, well what's the difference, it's a gift in the final analysis so why "lend" ourselves about "lend or lease" to Great Britain.

One angle on which Uncle Sam might do some smart trading with John Bull is in South America. You see Britain has some extensive holdings down there, and if Adolph Hitler should win in Europe, he would have a stronger hold on South America when taking over the British rights.

Uncle Sam should put in a clause that British investments in South America are collateral on our loans of war material to Britain.

In this hour of need, America is crying for another Will Rogers to come along and give the people the joy of plain honest humor. Bob Burns the famous Scotch poet endeared himself to the hearts of his countrymen with poems that rang true to Scottish life. Burns would take the lowly field mouse or the cattle standing out in the weather and with a few magic touches of his pen write a poem that would fill the mind with loving kindness for the things of nature. That's a knack that a fellow doesn't learn out of school books. It's just born in a man and you either have it or you do not. Will Rogers had it. Today we need another Will Rogers in our national life.

Well after this is all over we shall be up in the air more than ever. The boys will be trained to be aviators, their girl friends will be talking to them in terms of wings, motors and flying hours and the old folks will have to learn a new vocabulary, aviation.

There is a lwayer friend of mine over in Joliet that gets a "great kick" out of flying. Every time a new air line is started he is ready to have the first ride. I believe he has taken one of those "stratosphere" flights to New York. You know that's a way up. Well that's his hobby in life, he enjoys it. I'll try and see you next week. So long.

VEGETABLES SERVED STREAMLINED FASHION
(See Recipes Below.)

NEW WAYS WITH VEGETABLES

The time may come when we will get all our vitamins in little pellets, but I doubt it—not when eating vegetables is as much fun as it is. There would be a big gap in our meals if such things as tender little green beans or whole carrots rolled in butter, disappeared from the dinner table.

Success in cooking vegetables depends on such small things—the amount of water in the pan, whether the cover is on or off, whether the vegetables are removed from the heat when they are just tender or allowed to continue cooking until they become slightly mushy.

Remember, it's "covers off," for all green-colored vegetables. Then the acids which are given off during cooking are not held in the pan where they turn the brilliant green color to a dull olive. To keep the vitamins in the vegetables instead of losing them in the cooking water use just as little liquid as possible. For mild-flavored vegetables an inch of water in the bottom of the pan to keep the pieces from burning is ample. Vegetables like spinach, which contain a great deal of water, should be cooked in the moisture which clings to the leaves after washing.

And if you value your vitamins, never, never discard the liquid from canned vegetables. Place it in a saucepan, heat until the liquor evaporates to about one-half, then add the vegetable and heat to serving temperature.

Lima Bean Casserole.

- (Makes 6 servings)
- 1 10-ounce can tomatoes (1½ cups)
 - 2 medium-sized onions (minced)
 - 1 small green pepper (finely chopped)
 - 2 tablespoons molasses
 - ½ teaspoon dry mustard
 - 1 teaspoon salt
 - ½ teaspoon pepper
 - 1 No. 2 can green lima beans (2½ cups)
 - 6 strips bacon

Put tomatoes through sieve, add minced onion and green pepper and simmer for 15 minutes. Then add molasses, mustard, salt, pepper and butter. Stir until well mixed. Drain lima beans and arrange in a shallow, well-greased casserole. Pour sauce over them and arrange strips of bacon over top. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) for 20 minutes or until bacon is crisp. Serve piping hot.

Beets, Orange-Style.

- (Makes 6 servings)
- 3 tablespoons grated orange rind
 - ¼ teaspoon salt
 - ¼ teaspoon paprika
 - 1 tablespoon sugar
 - 1 tablespoon water
 - 2 tablespoons lemon juice
 - 4 tablespoons butter
 - ½ cup orange juice
 - ½ tablespoon cornstarch
 - 1 tablespoon water
 - 3 cups cooked beets (sliced)

Place orange rind, salt, paprika, sugar, water and lemon juice in saucepan and simmer for 5 minutes. Cream butter until soft, and add it to hot mixture together with orange juice. Blend cornstarch and water to a smooth paste and add to sauce. Cook slowly, stirring occasionally, until sauce is thickened and cornstarch is thoroughly cooked, about 15 minutes. Pour over hot cooked beets and mix lightly but thoroughly. For company dinners serve the beets in orange shells.

Corn and Bacon Rings.

- (Makes 7 servings)
- 7 slices bacon
 - 2 eggs
 - 1 12-ounce can whole kernel corn
 - 2 tablespoons flour
 - ½ teaspoon salt
 - Few grains pepper
 - ¼ teaspoon baking powder
 - ½ cup milk

Line muffin tins or custard cups with sliced bacon. Snip edges with kitchen scissors to prevent curling. Beat eggs slightly, and add well-drained corn. Sift flour, salt, pepper and baking powder together and add to corn together with milk. Fill bacon rings with this mixture. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees

REASON FOR SACRIFICE

By KARL GRAYSON

(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

ATTORNEY GENERAL CHENEY was admitted at once to Inspector Piper's office. His attitude was one of familiarity and confidence; thinly masking knowledge of his own importance.

Inspector Piper rose at sight of his visitor. The inspector's attitude was respectful.

"Good morning, Mr. Cheney. This is rather unusual, isn't it? Frankly, I'm flattered."

Attorney Cheney extended his hand, smiled easily and snapped open a cigarette case, which he offered his host.

"Hello, Piper. I know you're busy; must apologize for dropping in so abruptly. Wanted a word with you about young Noyes."

Piper arched his brows. "Noyes? Victor Noyes? You mean that young nobody we booked last night in connection with the Proctor woman murder?"

"The same. Mind telling me the facts about the case, Inspector?"

Cheney's manner was slightly irritating. This was odd. Piper spread his hands in a gesture of resignation.

"On the face of it, it looks dead open and shut. The woman was found dead in her apartment. Shot through the head. Sound of the shot attracted the attention of two men passing through the hall. They crashed open Miss Proctor's door and found her lying on the floor in a pool of blood. Young Noyes was standing over the body with a gun in his hand." Piper shrugged. "Dead open and shut. The kid was caught in the act of robbing the apartment and, in desperation, killing the woman."

Cheney saw the doubt in the inspector's eyes. He said, "Where's the hitch, Inspector? There's something screwy some place. You're not sold on the idea the kid killed her." The lawyer crushed out his cigarette. "Piper, I knew that boy when we were youngsters. Grew up in the same town together. He never seemed to me like a killer."

"Howard, some people die to realize an ambition. I guess I'm like that."

Piper was silent a moment. "Tell you what, Mr. Cheney, take a run down and talk with Noyes yourself. I'd like to check with your reactions after you've seen him."

Victor Noyes recognized the great attorney at once. He shook hands warmly, and Cheney saw that there was no trace of fear or dreaded anticipation in the youth's eyes.

"Sorry to see you in this jam, Vic. Read about it an hour ago. Tell me what happened. I'd like to help you, if possible."

Noyes laughed. He was a small man and weak looking. "You'll have a fine time helping me, Howard. I haven't got a leg to stand on."

"You mean you admit killing Grace Proctor?"

"I don't have to admit it. It's all settled as far as the public is concerned." He was silent a moment. Then, "Howard, I'm glad you dropped in. Remember when we were kids you once said I'd never amount to anything, never attract any attention? Those words have always haunted me."

"We were kids then, Vic. That's past. I'd like to help you now."

"Perhaps you can, but not in the way you think." Young Noyes' eyes were glistening. "Howard, I'm satisfied. I've always wanted people to know who I am. Well, I've got that wish. There isn't a paper in the country that didn't publish my picture this morning. Grace Proctor was a pretty popular opera star. But I'll bet she never got the publicity I'm getting now!"

"Man, you're crazy!"

"Maybe I am. After all, what is it that a man wants to live for? To realize an ambition, isn't it? To do something that will attract attention, to make people know who he is. Anyway, that's what I always wanted to live for. All my life I never amounted to much, or attracted any attention. I lost one job after another. I tried to live straight and honest, and found it didn't get me anywhere. Nobody knew who I was or cared. And all the time there was that burning sensation inside of me to attract attention. Howard, some people die to realize an ambition. I guess I'm like that."

Attorney Cheney looked deep into the younger man's eyes and saw there a longing that he had never imagined any man could possess. A glimmering of understanding came to him and as quickly vanished.

"Listen, you fool! You'll go to the chair for this, burn for something you never did! That's a hell of a way to die!"

"It'll be a long time before the trial is over, Howard, and folks will know who I am. The papers will be full of me. I'll read 'em every day, and that will be worth dying for."

Cheney still clutched the youth's shoulders. "Listen, you idiot! You didn't kill Grace Proctor! There was another man there! You were hiding in the room. You heard what was said. You saw him draw a gun and shoot. You watched him escape down the fire escape. And you let them think you did it! You're crazy!"

Noyes smiled. "Dramatic as always, eh, Howard. Yes, I think that would go over pretty good in a court room. But it wouldn't prove anything."

"It would prove a lot."

"How come?"

"Because you recognized that other man. You could identify him, prove he was there!"

For fully a minute the eyes of the two men looked deeply into each other's. Each knew what the other was thinking; each read accurately the message the other was seeking to convey. There was no need for words. Each understood.

Presently the man who would soon be charged with murder in the first degree, and who later would without doubt pay the supreme penalty, laid his hand on the arm of the man who had come to help him.

"Don't say it, Howard. I understand, and I'm willing to die. My life hasn't been worth living anyhow. With you it's different. You've accomplished all the things you've set out to do. You've made a name for yourself, become a big man. You've lived the kind of life I would have liked to live, but couldn't. And now the thing you can do that will help me most is to try and understand—and forget the rest."

Cheney stood back. The understanding that had lighted his face a few moments before returned and did not again vanish. He fought and triumphed over a desire to plead once more with the youth. And in that instant he harked back over his own experience, tried to compare his own life with that of young Victor Noyes and found himself groping for something to say that would change the youth's mind.

He turned at last and reached the door before turning. Victor was still sitting on the cot, smiling happily. Newspapers whose front pages emblazoned his name were strewn about the floor at his feet. His thoughts fled back to the night previous, to the weeks before, during which he had suffered the agonies of the damned in withholding knowledge of his mad love affair with Grace Proctor from his wife and the prying curiosity of the public. And then again his mind dwelt on Victor Noyes, and for the first time in months his soul was at peace.

Remembers Her Manners, Even While in Swimming

And there was the party on a houseboat anchored in a harbor on the sound. It was a hot July afternoon, and a lot of us were sitting around on deck, and suddenly somebody said, "Look! What on earth are they doing?" and we all looked. There was a large proud yacht anchored near by and what they were doing was obvious enough—they were lowering a dowager down the side of the yacht into the water. She was a large, proud dowager to match, and she wore a bathing suit and a vast straw hat; and it took two members of the crew to get her down the steps, and in. They launched her finally, however, while we watched fascinated.

Once embarked, she became a swimming hat, with plump white arms. She swam a breast-stroke, small and slow, but steady. Somebody said in a hushed voice, "She seems to be coming over here," and it did indeed begin to look that way, and presently there was no doubt about it. We all flocked to the rail to welcome her, and we all leaned over. When she was within speaking distance, she paused, and did a kind of dog-paddle to keep herself afloat and said, "Good afternoon. Is Mrs. Weeks on board?"

"No," we said. "No—unfortunately—Mrs. Weeks has gone ashore."

"Ah," said the seagoing dowager with a nod of her hat. "Sorry I've missed her."

At this point she sank a little, but came up again at once, blowing out water. She turned and resumed the small, slow breast-stroke—but for a few strokes only. Then she had a social afterthought, and she paused again, and dog-paddled once more, and added gravely—all of this was grave and courteous, as in a drawing room—"When Mrs. Weeks returns, will you tell her, please, that Mrs. DeCoursey K. Breckonridge CALLED?"

His People's People

The late Douglas Fairbanks said in an interview after a visit to England: "A very smart young Englishman of good family once got engaged to a Chicago girl. He told her about his splendid country home with its 45 gardeners and so forth, and the delighted girl exclaimed: 'O Bill, how lovely! We'll live with your people, of course.' But Bill said: 'No, I don't think so. You see, my people are still living with their people.'"

To thread a needle easily, cut the end of the thread on the bias.

Keep cheese in a well-covered dish or it will become dry and tasteless.

Baking powder biscuits and cookies rise better and brown more evenly on baking sheets than they do in pans.

If milk boils over on the stove, sprinkle the spot with salt. This will at once remove the disagreeable odor.

Iron rust may be removed from white goods with sour milk.

Parsley washed with hot water keeps its flavor better and is easier to chop.

If you wish to boil a cracked egg, place a little vinegar in the water in which it is boiled. This will keep the egg from seeping through the crack in the shell.

Creaky stairs, like creaky floors, are an unnecessary annoyance. If your stairway gets too noisy, here's the way to go about silencing the offending treads. Simply nail a few extra finishing nails through the treads into the risers below. The finishing nails used should be three inches long, and they should slant alternately to the right and to the left as they are driven in. And after counter-sinking the nails, the nail-holes may be filled with plastic wood and painted.
